Juvenile Sports Committee Formed

A meeting was held in the Canadian Legion Lounge on May 4th by a group of sports minded people, the purpose of the meeting was to discuss and form a juvenile sports committee. Mr. J. A. McDonald explained to the gathering the need of a committee to control and direct youngsters in all organized sport. It was felt that the youth of Coleman needed more direction, and in doing so that it would make them into better citizens. Some of the suggestions put forward were to teach the youths the need of better sportsmanship, and playing not for what they could get out of it, but for what they could put into it. Second, that if a child would not obey the coach, deft referee, and in general misbehave while in sports that he or she would be dropped from the team, or given a two week suspension to think over their deeds. The main point stressed to make the youths themselves more self-reliant, and to fully understand the need of good sportsmanship. It was felt by all present that players must be more dependent upon their own in regards to the obtaining of equipment as it had been proven that a player would take more care if they had to obtain most of the equipment used. Plans were briefly outlined as to the formation of different sports, and the approval of coaches, etc. The matter of finance was discussed, and it was felt that a central committee handle all money's involved so as to give proper distribution for transportation, equipment, etc. All present were enthusiastic with the general plans and decided to elect a basic committee to get things underway, with the understanding that all groups interested could appoint representatives to this committee. The committee was composed of president J. A. McDonald; Secretary J. R. Hill; committee members: George Jenkins, H. Allen, E. Mascherin, J. Warréan and R. McCartney were to act as a Ways and Means committee problem. The matter of entering two Coleman teams in the Pony League this year was discussed and it was felt that not enough time was available to organize to enter, but that all efforts would be put forward so as to enter next year. Conditions were too unsettled at the present time to commit Coleman in this league. All Lodges, Clubs, and other organizations are cordially invited to get behind this project, and full information can be obtained upon request.

Teachers' Institute At Pincher Creek

Students of the Crownstee Pass and Pincher Creek areas had a holiday on Tuesday, May 3rd while their teachers went back to school. The occasion was a teachers' institute devoted to effective teaching of the language arts with special attention to reading in grades 1 to 12.

Miss Alice Heenan, a teacher of wide experience, gave five lectures and a demonstration lesson. A review of primary reading skills was followed by a discussion of methods or reteaching skills to pupils who had failed to master them at the primary level. Miss Heenan had failed to master them at the primary level. Miss Heenan gave many examples of phonetic and structural analysis useful in the upper grades. She emphasized that the teaching of skills is a responsibility of every teacher.

The grade IX students of the Pincher Creek High School contributed greatly to the success of the institute by acting as a demonstration class for a lesson on dictionary skills. They brought credit to their school by their excellent co-operation and ready response.

In the summing-up period, the speaker showed that listening, reading, speaking and writing are different aspects of the language arts and should be taught as a whole. Good reading involves not only word perception and comprehension but also emotional reaction to the material read and integration of the ideas into the behavior patterns of the reader.

After four o'clock the discussions were carried on over coffee and doughnuts provided by the Pincher Creek local of the A.T.A. and served by the staff and students of the High School.

All teachers from Coleman attended this important meeting.

No. 3 Highway To Be Rebuilt From Bellevue to Coleman

Tenders have been called by the Alberta Department of Highways for the rebuilding of the No. 3 highway from Bellevue to Coleman. As yet no definite word has been received as to whether the highway will follow the same route or will be changed through Blairmore. This is a project that certainly will be welcomed by all Pass motorists, as this portion of No. 3 highway has deteriorated to such an extent that travel has become very hazardous.

Life of Louis Riel Subject For Historical Book

The stirring life of Louis Riel is the subject of a new historical book being offered for sale during Alberta's golden jubilee year. The 214-page publication entitled "Louis Riel, 1844-1885" is a critical study of life of the controversial leader of the Red River and North-West rebellions. Written by the late William McCartney Davidson, it is now being offered for sale by The Albertan Publishing Co., Calgary, at $2 a copy.

A condensed version of the book was printed in serial form in the Albertan in 1951, and a pamphlet was offered for sale in the following year. However, the present book is the first complete, unadorned version of Mr. Davidson's 16-year study of Louis Riel.

The book begins by tracing Riel's ancestors and the activity of his parents, Jean Louis and Julie Riel. It tells of his early life with the Metis, his education in Montreal, and the Red River Rebellion of 1870. The last section deals with the Riel Rebellion of 1885, its failure, and Riel's subsequent trial and execution.

The book is one of several planned during Alberta's fiftieth anniversary by non-governmental bodies as a contribution towards the province's historical heritage.

Remains To Be Seen

A veteran actor, just passed his 80th birthday, was still active on the stage.

"Tell me," asked a friend. "How do you manage to keep going?" "It's really very simple," replied the actor. "I am called every noon by the maid. I have coffee and read the paper. The last thing I read is the obituary column. If my name isn't there, I get dressed — and go to work."

St. John "Save a Life" Week Sponsored Locally

Next week, May 16 to 22, St. John Ambulance in this area is holding "Save a Life" Week. The idea is to train, during this period, as many people as possible in the use of artificial respiration in an effort to reduce the number of drownings that take some 1,000 lives each year in Canada.

It is interesting to note that artificial respiration is almost as old as recorded history. However, it is only in comparatively recent times that methods have been devised that are really effective.

Long before Biblical times, when someone had to be revived, he was placed on his back and hot pitch was thrown on his chest and abdomen. It was thought that this hot pitch would cause an involuntary gasp which would start the victim breathing again.

One method mentioned in the Bible was that used by Elijah who, when he found a boy who had stopped breathing, laid his weight on him and removed it, repeating this procedure until breathing was restored. Another early method consisted of placing the victim over a bent-over spade and moving the sapling up and down in an effort to restore respiration.

In the nineteenth century the victim was lashed face downwards over the back of a horse and the horse was set off at a trot with the belief that the joggling would force air in and out of the lungs. Mouth to mouth breathing, still used sometimes to start breathing in newborn infants, is described in the New Testament. The use of hand-operated bellows and the pumpator replaced this method.

In the eighteenth century the French introduced the method of rolling a drowning person over a barrel to take water out of the lungs. However, it is now known that very little water gets into the lungs in drowning.

All of these crude methods — each of them enjoying some success — have been replaced by three sound types of artificial respiration, each of which is taught by St. John Ambulance and each of which is a proved life-saver. These are the Silverthorn Method, Schafer's and the Holger-Nielsen Method. Two hours training in one of these systems, which St. John is offering to anyone who wishes to take a class, is enough to learn the fundamentals of artificial respiration — enough, perhaps, to save a life during the swimming and boating season this summer.

GARDEN NOTES

Humus is good substitute for manure--compost heap

One of the very best substitutes for manure is humus, which is simply a fancy name for any vegetable refuse, grass clippings, weeds, straw or even clean garbage, which has been mixed or covered with soil, piled in a corner, watered occasionally and allowed to decompose.

The careful gardener will not waste anything that will rot down. All weeds, either pulled or cut, any grass clippings or leaves, are piled on the compost heap, or if we have not such a thing, they will be dug under right in the garden and immediately. This material will add loose bulk to any soil, making light sand more retentive of moisture and loosening up clay and making it easier to cultivate.

From a little space

It is simply astounding the amount of vegetables that can be produced from a little plot, not twenty feet each way. And not only is big volume possible but there is another advantage and that is high quality vegetables ready for salad or pot right at the door.

It is usually possible to buy vegetables cheaply in this country during the summer months, but no matter how close the corner fruit store is, it is just impossible to get certain things that compare in freshness with those harvested from our own garden. Fake peas or corn, or lettuce or radishes, all these vegetables quickly lose their freshness.

In a few hours, and in the city we are lucky to get vegetables less than 24 hours old, they start to dry out and get tough. Their natural sugars turn to starch and despite water and special wrappings they lose crispness. And as for vitamins, it is a well known fact that they are among the most perishable things known to man.

For a real show

For the average flower garden, whether big or small, planting in changes is recommended by those with experience. This means, instead of single plants or straight rows, we set out a group of one variety and possibly color. Where space is limited this will mean only two or three asters, zinnias, marigolds, balsam, and so on, in one clump or group, then something else, and so on until the whole bed is planted.

Generally the taller things go at the back, the medium in the centre, and the little edging things like lobelia, alyssum, dwarf zinnias, marigolds and so on, in the front.

But it is well not to be too particular. Here and there we bring some of the taller things forward. This all makes for informality and if we plan a little for continuous bloom, a variety of color.

Irrigation costs not recovered on low rates

LETHBRIDGE, Alta. Dr. Andrew Stewart, president of the University of Alberta, told agriculturists here recently that contracts with water users are the controlling factor in the continuation of irrigation projects.

Normally when there is investment in a new project, returns from the project could be expected to cover its cost, plus the prevailing interest rate. Dr. Stewart said, "This is not the case for irrigation," he continued. "We should know what the total cost will be, what we will recover from users and the amount of the subsidy required."

Contracts with water users on payment for irrigation services should be set at a figure which will ensure continuation of the project.

If the contract rate is too low, the right acquired will develop value. Land prices will climb and the farmer will be able to dispose of his property at a profit, he said. On the other hand, if the rate is too high the farmer's operation may be uneconomical and adjustments and changes would have to be made.

The size of farm units in irrigated areas depends on factors such as soil fertility. The tendency is to have the units too small, he said. He suggested a reason for this might be that too much emphasis has been placed on output per acre.

Dr. Stewart said emphasis should be placed, not on what should be grown, but on what can reasonably be expected to be done. He added that only if production increased to meet an increased demand could the farmers obtain a reasonable return and thus maintain a satisfactory contract.

Shortage good seed in parts of Alberta

There is a shortage of good seed in north and west central Alberta, reports Arthur M. Wilson, field crops commissioner, Alberta Department of Agriculture. Many farmers will be forced to buy the seed they need. If you buy registered or certified seed you can be sure of its quality. If, however, you buy commercial seed or seed from a neighbor ask to see the control sample certificate which gives the germination and weed seeds.

Don't plant weed seeds. Weed seeds not common to an area can easily be introduced in years when seed has to be moved from more distant points. The spread of Tartary Buckwheat, Wild Mustard, Toad Flax and many of the other noxious weeds can be largely caused by farmers planting uncleaned grain. "What appears to be low priced seed at the time of purchase may be the most expensive seed the farmer ever planted," says Mr. Wilson.

Seed cleaning plants now in many municipal districts have graded seed for sale at reasonable prices. Seed graded under the Seeds Act of Canada may be ordered through the local country elevator agents or bought direct from a seed cleaning plant. Your district-agriculturist can tell you where you can buy seed. Graded seed is more than a good investment; it is a necessity.

Residence fires account for 400 deaths annually

Residential fires account for the deaths of more than 400 Canadians each year—half of them children under 15 years of age—according to the All Canada Insurance Federation.

Stressing the importance of fire prevention in the home, officials of the federation, which represents more than 200 fire, automobile and casualty insurance companies in Canada, advise a thorough check-up of potential fire hazards at every spring cleaning program.

All Canada officials recommend the following precautions:

1. Before storing winter clothing for summer, remove matches from pockets.
2. Clear old newspapers, magazines and inflammable material from attics, basements, garages and spare rooms.
3. Painting and cleaning materials are hazardous; store inflammable liquids in plainly marked safety cans, and destroy rags or clothing soaked with paint, furniture polish or wax.
4. Clean old leaves and rubbish from eaves and behind shrubbery.
5. When burning leaves, rubbish or grass, watch carefully for flying sparks.
6. Have electrical wiring and equipment examined by a qualified electrician for wear or damage which might have occurred during winter.

HOUSING BOOM

If the present rate of home building is maintained in Canada, says The Financial Post, Calgary would double its size in six years. Edmonton in eight and Toronto in 12 years.

The reason that a hippopotamus spends so much time in water is to rest his weary legs. He's so heavy that he can't stand on dry land long without getting exhausted.

Kitchen Meditations By JANE DALE

SONG FOR ALL CANADIANS

Come all men of the soil, the fisheries and mines;

Of water, and the air; the towns and cities too;

Stand firm beneath our flag across this wide domain.

To our God, our country and ourselves be true!

Stand firm Canadians! Hold fast to liberty!

Move on; look up; attain our goal.

With strength in unity! Come men of all lands; all creeds;

No matter what our birth, our high or lowly caste;

Stand firm for Right; a precious heritage.

Bequeathed to Canadians from our glorious past.

Stand firm Canadians! (written when Canada entered the war—1929-1945)

In better position to meet rust epidemic this year

Although it is much too early for scientists to tell us anything about possible rust infection in Western Canada during 1955, we are now able to get a glimpse of the present situation in Texas, which is the source of any epidemic that might ultimately find its way to Western Canada.

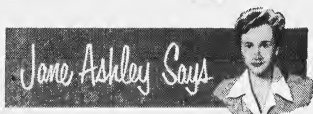

A report from Texas, suggests that rust of wheat has been prevalent throughout the state in varying degrees all winter and could develop into a severe epidemic there.

Rust of wheat was found in the fall from the Panhandle to the Gulf and early centres were identified as 56 and race 15-B. So far as Western Canada is concerned, race 56 has been almost entirely absent since the introduction of Thatcher and race 15-B will now, we hope, be fairly well taken care of in the normal rust area through the distribution of Selkirk wheat. But there could be other races.

Rust, if it comes, will build up from the extreme south, gradually working its way north and west to our Canadian Plains as that rust of wheat has been prevalent throughout the state in varying degrees all winter and could develop into a severe epidemic there.

Then came the heavy rains in the spring which changed the situation and caused the build-up south of the border. This was followed later by the far reaching shower early in June which affected Western Canada.

We may or may not have a rust epidemic this year, but of one thing we are sure: we are in a far better position to meet it than we were in 1954. (Scarle Grain Co.)

Home Workshop

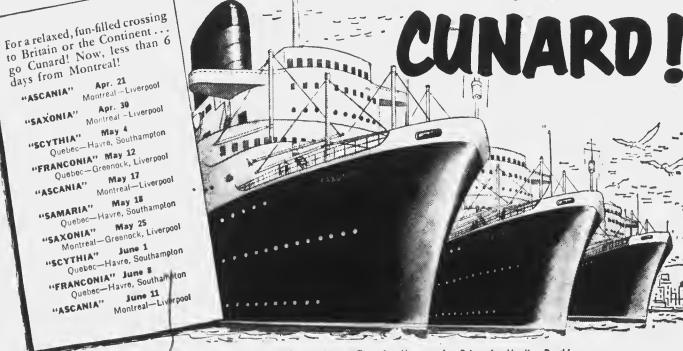

This apartment house for purple martins is the right size to make a backyard attraction. Martins like to make their nests near a dwelling. It must 10 to 12 feet off the ground or it will not be used. This mansion complete with chimney has no framing so make it of 1/2 inch glued-up stock. Use any width of scrap to be found around the shop. The pattern gives tracing diagrams for the shaped parts and large drawings showing just how to cut out the pieces and the steps in assembling. This pattern is included in the Bird House Packet which will be postpaid for $1.50. If only the martin house is ordered send only 35c.

Besides the illustrated directions for making the cabinet in the sketch above, today's pattern shows how to modernize various outmoded beds. Remember those of the last Century with horse pieces as high as tall men? With foot to match? The pattern sketches show a simple process to bring such pieces up to date. And what has become of all those fancy brass beds? If you have either of these old styles you will want this pattern. With a few minutes use of the hacksaw these brass jobs are trimmed down to Hollywood lines all ready for tailored slipcovers and spreads. How to measure materials for ruffled slipcovers and to make spreads with corded seams is shown with large sketches on pattern 313. Copy of this pattern is 35c.

Whole Saskatchewan Jubilee program now taking shape

MOOSE JAW.—Every man, woman and child in the province will have the opportunity to participate in celebrations for Saskatchewan's Golden Jubilee this summer. Fred McGuinness, executive director of the Saskatchewan Golden Jubilee Committee, told Canadian Club members here, outlining the two-year preparations for the Province's fiftieth birthday he explained how the whole Saskatchewan program is now taking shape.

"Starting with the coming of warm weather and dry roads there is going to be so much activity in nearly all communities that every person in the community should be involved," he stated. "Literally hundreds of thousands of Saskatchewan people will get into the act."

250 Organizations Over 250 cities, towns and villages have organized local Jubilee committees and are busy working out their own program of celebrations. It is expected that by the end of seeding operations over 300 local committees will be at work. Each committee will make its own plans and set its own Jubilee dates, but they will all fit into the general picture of province-wide observance of Saskatchewan's fiftieth birthday.

Local communities are helping to tell the story of the Province by writing their own local histories. The Story of Saskatchewan, written by Jim Wright, is now on the press and will be on sale in bookstores early in May. The author traces the development of Saskatchewan from the passing of the last ice age up to the middle of 1954. A condensed version will be used as a school textbook.

A color film on Saskatchewan will be shown in theatres in June as part of the Jubilee program. It joins in the salute to the pioneers by tracing Saskatchewan's development in picture form.

90,000 Taking part Nearly 90,000 Saskatchewan school students will take part in a Jubilee program of song on Thursday afternoon, May 26. The program will feature songs of English, Welsh, French, German, Ukrainian, Dutch, Scandinavian and Czechoslovakian groups. Special Jubilee music and a historical sketch of Saskatchewan's development since the days of the first settlers has been prepared.

Invitations to share in the celebrations have gone out to 20,000 former residents in all parts of Canada and the United States, and in Mexico, South America and overseas. Many hundreds already have indicated that they will revisit their old homes in holiday time. Local communities are including special home-coming ceremonies in their Jubilee plans.

Governor-General Vincent Massey will visit in Saskatchewan from May 13 to May 16 to help start the general festivities. Prime Minister Louis St. Laurent will be here during the first week in September to be special guest at some of the closing ceremonies.

The whole province is putting on its best Jubilee dress, with cities and towns decorating their streets and buildings, and railway stations displaying flags and bunting. Special lighting effects will be part of a "Beautiful Saskatchewan" program.

A debatable point

Do women dress to please themselves, to arouse the envy of other women, or to attract men? That is something that is endlessly discussed. James Laver, internationally celebrated expert on the subject of clothes, has said, "Women take pleasure in dressing—in competition with other women—to please men. The basic impulse of feminine fashion is to attract the opposite sex."

The price was right

John Law, Scottish financier and speculator, originated a bet he made many times and never lost. He offered 20,000 to 1 that any man who wished to bet on it could not throw double sixes with dice six times in succession. A surprising number of men took his bet. They were aware it bordered on the impossible, but they liked the price.

Music and matrimony

One out of every 10 proposals of marriage is made while the couple is dancing. So says an expert on the subject of marriage. The tune currently inspiring the most proposals is "All I Want From You." It used to be "Why Do I Love You?" Before that it was "My Blue Heaven." Anyway, if your daughter is having difficulty in inspiring the man in her life to propose matrimony, tell her that the next time he takes her dancing she should arrange to have the band play "All I Want From You."

Pampering the help

Not so long ago a color psychologist said if a secretary wore a red dress it would stimulate her brain. Make her quicker on the trigger mentally. Now another expert on the same subject claims black typewriters are depressing. That they slow up a secretary and decrease her endurance. He suggests brighter colors for typewriters and favors yellow. Keep this in mind, mister. If your girl Friday seems a trifle slow mentally and lacking in speed as a typist, buy her a few red dresses and a yellow-colored typewriter.

A strain on system

The majority of saxophone players become bald-headed at a comparatively early age. This is also true of cellists and all orchestral who play the horns in dance bands and symphony orchestras. Why? Well, sir, it is claimed the physical strain of blowing the horns affects the circulation and deprives the roots of the hair of their due supply of blood.

Pre-season equipment care

Now is the time to get that summer sports equipment out of the closet and put it into good shape for the coming season. Make sure that your leather equipment, gloves, shoes, etc., are well conditioned with saddle soap. Finally, check to see that your uniform and other equipment is all right. Take care of your equipment. It may mean avoiding a serious injury.

Play a secondary game

For those athletes in such strenuous sports as football, track, basketball, etc., a wise move would be to learn a secondary sport such as volleyball, tennis, golf or badminton. This is part of the tapering off process and should be included in an athlete's schedule. The secondary sport skills should be learned while the athlete is still in good shape. So to continue your program of mental and physical health take up one of the less strenuous sports.

Pay attention when practising

Study shows that when the average athlete is being instructed by his coach or is practicing on his own, only one in ten actually gives the job his full attention. This does not mean he stands there looking off into space or thinking of something else, but that he is not consciously directing his attention.

So, if you want to get the most out of your practices, start the season right and direct your full attention to what you are trying to do or to the instruction to which you are listening.

Develop proper eating habits

Now is the time to develop those all-important proper eating habits. To maintain a feeling of vigor—in athletics and in everyday life—it is important to get at least 100 gms. of protein a day. To do so make sure you eat lots of the dairy products—milk, cheese (especially cottage cheese) also lean meat, fish and eggs. Simply by making sure you drink a quart of milk a day you are assured of 40 gms. of protein. This gives you a terrific start, is easy to get and pleasant to take.

Advertising...

Modern advertising is a necessity to hold and build business. Be proud of your business, of the goods you have to sell, of the services you have to offer in your particular line. Show the progressive spirit and the desire to serve by advertising. Do not hide your light under a bushel — proclaim far and wide who you are and what you have to sell and where your place of business is, for public memory is short, and advertising is a powerful aid to all types of businesses. Moreover, people as a general rule shop where they are invited.

OF MANY THINGS

(By Ambrose Hills)

Winston Churchill

A neighbor of mine served on the staff of a railroad train which carried Sir Winston Churchill in Canada. This railroader still proudly displays the big cigar that Churchill gave him. With even more pride, he displays the book, personally autographed, which the great man was thoughtful enough to send to him on his return to England.

When the news came that Churchill had retired, my neighbor had genuine tears of sadness in his eyes.

That is the kind of loyalty and admiration Churchill earned from other men throughout his life. Why? What is the secret of his strength?

I think it was his common sense. Churchill said what he thought — and said it bluntly and straightforwardly. Such straightforward prose always amazes the world. Consider his statement, made on May 13th, three days after he was appointed prime minister, in England's darkest hour:

"I would say to the House, as I have said to those who have joined this government; I have nothing to offer but blood, toil, tears and sweat."

"You ask what is our policy? I will say it is to wage war — by sea, land and air, with all our might and with all the strength that God can give us; to wage war against a monstrous tyranny never surpassed in the dark lamentable catalogue of human crimes."

"That is our policy."

Well, that was it. That's just how the war was won. The way to win a war is to wage war in every possible way, with all the strength God can give you. But had another leader been asked that same question of policy, the chances are he would have answered with hundreds of high-flown phrases with little bearing on the subject.

Many people have wondered how Winston Churchill, re-elected to high office after those gray years of austerity, was able to bring good times back again to England so quickly. Well, the answer, in his own words, was again plain and straightforward. He said, "We must beware of trying to build a society in which nobody counts for anything except a politician, a society where enterprise gains no reward and thrift no privileges."

No doubt we all admire Sir Winston Churchill. Perhaps the best way to show our admiration would be to learn, from day to day, to speak plainly, and to think clearly. Let us try to make this our personal tribute to one of the greatest men in the world.

To Step Up Recruitment and Training of School Teachers

MONTREAL — An action program designed to step up recruitment and training of school-teachers was launched today by The Canadian Chamber of Commerce in the belief that "the problem of adequately staffing our educational institutions, in our expanding economy is one of paramount importance to the future of Canada." To make the program fully effective right across the country, Canada's national business organization is enlisting the aid of its 700 member Boards of Trade and Chambers of Commerce.

These groups, representing a cross-section of the country's business and community life are asked to give serious study and consideration to the teacher problem in Canada with the following objectives in mind: (a) training sufficient teachers to meet the increasing demands of enrolment which lie ahead (b) enlisting teachers who possess a high quality of talent and initiative (c) giving teachers adequate training (d) presenting teachers with such incentives and rewards as will be necessary to obtain for society both the number and quality of teachers required.

Provincial Chambers of Commerce, it is stated, are in a position to spearhead activity since education is broadly a provincial problem.

"Under such general sponsorship," it is stated, "a meeting could be arranged of businessmen and educators, including representatives of the Provincial Department of Education, in order to set up a province-wide committee to give consideration to the problem and plan action which might include, among others: Publication of a brochure stressing the satisfaction of the teaching profession, and the opportunities in it, for circulation in senior High School classes."

"Publication of posters for use on bulletin boards in schools and universities."

"Encouragement of local Chambers to initiate their own local recruitment programs."

"The appointment of a full-time teacher recruitment officer by the Departments of Education to furnish leadership in the program."

"Sponsorship of provincial or regional teacher recruitment conferences to illustrate successful techniques that can be used by local communities."

Specifically, it is stated, Canadian Boards and Chambers in all 10 provinces could:

1. Hold talks with outstanding educators of the community in order to draft a mutually agreeable joint program.
2. Arrange to have an outstanding local teacher address Secondary School students on the subject of teaching as a career.
3. Convince local businessmen of the need to provide scholarships for, graduating High School students interested in teaching.
4. Work with daily and weekly newspapers and local radio and television stations, providing them with promotional material on the need for teachers, and the many attractions of teaching as a profession.
5. Assist in retaining competent teachers. (Through "receptions, dinners, teacher "Honour Days" and other social affairs, the Chamber can help to give new teachers special welcomes and indicate to the teaching staff appreciation of their work.)
6. Survey existing salary schedules and if the need is apparent, assume the responsibility of informing the taxpayers where revisions in the local salary schedule appear to be necessary.
7. Work with school administrators to ensure that good equipment, supplies, and school surroundings are available.

Of course, you don't have to make gasoline yourself. But you do have to work at your job to make the money to buy gasoline. And today you don't have to work nearly as long as you did in 1939, or even 1946.

Back in 1939, the average Canadian had to work 33 minutes to earn enough to buy a gallon of gasoline.

Seven years later, in 1946, the same Canadian had to work 29 minutes to earn enough to buy a gallon of gasoline.

Today he has to work only 17 minutes — about half as long as in 1939 — to buy a gallon of gasoline.

(It's much better gasoline, too. Two gallons of today's gasoline does the work of three gallons made in the 20's.)

Hardy Annuals For Garden Color

OTTAWA, May 2, 1955 — At very little cost, the new home owner can brighten up his yard while the grounds are in the process of development, by growing short season flowers called hardy annuals. They can be sown early in the spring directly in the position where they are to bloom and will provide an abundance of color throughout most of the summer.

Most garden soils are satisfactory for growing hardy annuals. The soil can be kept in good condition by an application of manure or leaf mold dug into the soil in the fall or early spring. Seeding during the first week in May usually gives good results. If the soil is abnormally dry it is a good practice to water the trenches prior to seeding, followed by covering and firming.

Highway Safety Week

OTTAWA — Canadians have been called upon by His Excellency the Governor General to observe the Victoria day holiday, May 21, 22, 23, as Highway Safety Week-End.

In an appeal to the nation Mr. Massey said:

"Over the holiday week-end just before the National Highway Safety Conference — the first long summer week-end — the traffic on our roads will be heavy. Let us all, in every part of Canada, now plan to observe this holiday, by preventing accidents of every kind on streets and highways. Let us see if we can reduce them to the lowest figure in Canada's history for these three days.

"We can do this, and I believe will do so, if we realize that such accidents mean loss in life, in suffering and material damage. Let us then take care to see that none of us is the cause of such loss or injury anywhere in our great country."

In all ten provinces a similar appeal has been made by the Lieutenant-Governors and provincial governments to drive carefully during the busy holiday week-end. During the Victoria Day week-end of last year 84 Canadians were killed in road accidents; on the same holiday of 1953 highway dead were 54; and in 1952 the total was 33.

Highway Safety Week-end immediately precedes the opening of the National Highway Safety Conference in Ottawa on May 24. The first national conference on highway safety, convened by the Canadian Good Roads Association, will attract delegates from every province.

So You Think You Are Smart

No. 1: How did "boycott" originate?

Boycott is derived from the surname of Captain Boycott (1832-1897), who managed an estate in Ireland. His harsh methods of collecting rents for the absentee landlord made him exceedingly unpopular with the tenants. In 1880 the tenants banded together and demanded a reduction in rents. Boycott refused to comply with the demand, whereupon the tenants, began to harass the land agent in every conceivable manner. They refused to work for him and would not permit anybody to do it. These methods were adopted by the Land League to compel its enemies to comply with its demands and boycott immediately became popular in the sense of any organized commercial or social taboo.

No. 2: What Are The Requirements for Burial in Westminster Abbey?

There are no specific requirements for interment in Westminster Abbey, when a person of distinction dies the deans of Westminster may or may not invite his relatives to have his remains interred in the Abbey. Because of the scarcity of space it is probable that burials in Westminster Abbey will be rare in the future.

No. 3: What Is Scotland Yard? Scotland Yard is a group of buildings surrounded by a courtyard in London, England. It was long famous as the headquarters of the London police force. The headquarters of London Metropolitan Police Force were moved to New Scotland Yard on the Thames Embankment in 1890.

No. 4: Which is lighter, a steel ship or a wooden ship?

A steel ship is lighter than a wooden ship of the same dimensions. This is because steel is so much stronger than wood, weight for weight, than a great deal more wood must be used in building a ship of equal dimensions and strength. Welded steel ships are faster in the water than riveted steel ships because rivet heads increase the friction. Welded ships weigh about 13% less than riveted ships.

OUR COMPLETE SHORT STORY—

THE PATTERN

By ANNA E. WILSON

WIMPLY stood looking at the great crane swinging along its narrow gauge track with the husky Ole Peters riding it with a load of freight. Wimpy shivered, then pumped as the voice of the President barked out.

"Where are those stock reports, Wimpy?" It does seem as if you could find some work to do around here instead of standing staring at the roof."

The stock reports, in their wire basket, were right now reposing on the President's desk, placed there by Zack, the rechartered office boy. Zack had no fear whatever of the President, who tolerated his lack of respect for any kind of authority with restrained patience, but sometimes it seemed as if the President could hardly see Wimpy's small, under-sized figure and mildly frightened face without barking at him. The President was a big man and plump, while Wimpy stood a bare five feet two and weighted little over a hundred pounds.

Wimpy climbed up on his stool and started working at his ledgers. He was chief clerk and should have been head bookkeeper long ago for his work was accurate, but when it came to promotions it was easy to overlook Wimpy in favor of more aggressive men.

"The old man's on the ramp this morning," Zack had heard the President's bark and was sympathetic. "Doctor's just reported that Ole's got to come off the crane. Got a bad heart and even though he carries heart pills in his pocket, Ole's always slipping to the waist and leaving his clothes in the dump basket."

Wimpy put down a careful figure. "It's too bad about Ole. He loves that crane and hates the job as watchman Mr. Zimmerman's got mapped out for him. How's your mother getting along now, Zack?"

"Mother's not working much anymore. Things are pretty tight right now, but the Old Man's promised me the first opening round here with more pay. Maybe as a clerk. What's that you got there, Wimpy, your ledger?"

Wimpy nodded. "Saturday afternoon, you know. 'I'm going to eat in the Park.'"

Zack whistled cheerfully. "Bet the pigeons get most of it, Wimpy. It's a shame, keeping you here all these years when you should be on the book." He jumped as the President's bark came out at them.

"Wimpy, where's the time sheet?" Zack grabbed the time sheet and fled. At the President's door, he corked his head on his fifteen-year-old neck and walked in boldly.

Wimpy wished he could be more like Zack. To be sure the President barked at Zack, too, but he was very apt to give him a stray quarter or a bottle of coke, just as he was apt to give, on occasions, a cigar to Ole, the big crane-man; but Wimpy was so insignificant that in the rewards for merit he was completely overlooked.

Wimpy put his desk tidy and picked up his lunch. He put his hat on carefully, and calling good-bye to Zack, went out on the street. He boarded a bus timetely pushing in among the passengers, and got out at the Park. He passed through the Park and entered in at the big iron gates of the Zoo. The gatekeeper smiled as he took his ticket. "He's waiting for you, eating his heart out," he joked mildly, as Wimpy made his way to the cage of Milo, the big African lion.

Wimpy was a little man, shy and timid. Someone had told him once that we are very apt to take on the qualities of the things that we admire and Wimpy had a pathetic admiration for the big lion. He shivered deliciously when he roared, and when Milo lay like an immobile statue just thinking, Wimpy came timidly closer to the bars.

Spending each Saturday afternoon with the lion made Wimpy's life tolerable. Watching Milo, he could imagine himself waiting right up to the President and asking for the job of chief bookkeeper. He imagined the dignified walk of the great beast, one foot ahead of the other, silent and sure, or he just sat quietly on the iron bench and studied him. Sitting thus, Wimpy's heart swelled and he dreamed happily of doing some fine deed that would bring him into the limelight at the office. He could imagine the President bowing or maybe shaking him by the hand.

But Monday morning found Wimpy back at his desk, as neat and methodical as ever. There wasn't much opportunity for doing daring deeds at Zimmerman's, and if there was, it didn't come in the way of timid little clerks, no matter how willing.

"Wimpy," the President's mood was worse than usual by the sound of his bark. "Go out and tell Ole I want him."

Wimpy went out into the yard of the plant and looked towards the great crane just as he heard a startled shout from the foreman. The big crane lurched, came to a dead stop in the middle of the track and Ole could be seen falling over against the side of his basket.

"Holy cow," the foreman's voice was hoarse. "Ole's having a heart attack."

In less than a minute, the whole place was in a hubbub with the President yelling for someone to do something, but it seemed as if there was nothing to be done. Ole's condition was dangerous. The only way to get help to him was along the narrow track, only a few inches wide, high above the main floor. Men looked at the dizzy height, at the track like a thin ribbon, and shook their heads—all but Wimpy.

Nobody noticed the little clerk quietly get the pills from Ole's pocket and start to climb, and Wimpy climbed steadily. His stomach was sick and his head dizzy but he wrenched the track and started to walk out to Ole. Half way across the track he glanced down and panic seized him. He started slipping sideways while his mind went blank for a split second—and then, suddenly, he was no longer Wimpy, he was Milo, stepping safe and sure, he felt a mild sort of exhilaration. He climbed down into the basket, gave Ole his heart table and started the machinery. Eager hands seized Ole and carried him off to the hospital while Wimpy, for the moment forgotten, climbed back on his high stool and turned his face, white and shaken, to the ledger.

Even the President was early on Tuesday. Wimpy could hear him barking right through the office door, as Zack scurried in with the stock reports. "Who's responsible for the promotions round this office anyway? Why hasn't a man like Wimpy been made head bookkeeper long ago? Zack," he roared, at the boy's retreating back. "Get out there and go to work with Wimpy!"

"Gosh, Wimpy," Zack's voice was awed. "Everybody thinks it's wonderful, what you did for Ole."

"Wimpy," said Wimpy with dignity.

Plant cuttings must root to survive

John Walker, Forest Nursery Station, Indian Head, Sask., states that cuttings, which are portions of stems separated from parent plants, can survive and grow only if roots first develop on them and secure water and plant food from the soil or medium in which they may be planted. Therefore, the more favorable conditions are for the development of roots, the higher will be the survival and the greater the development of roots and new growth.

In the propagation of plants from unrooted hardwood cuttings, whether secured in the fall or in early spring, the less they have been exposed to drying or varying conditions the better will be the results after being planted.

For best results with poplar or willow cuttings received from Forest Nursery Stations in Spring, the planter should select a place for them in the garden where the soil is friable, and reasonably damp and where additional care and moisture can be given to them throughout the growing season. By following this plan a higher percentage of rooting and greater tip growth are likely to occur, than if the unrooted cuttings are planted where they are to be finally located.

Early in spring of the following year the rooted plants can be planted in the permanent location and at the spacing desired. In planting the rooted cuttings should be handled in the manner recommended for young trees. A good growth may be pruned to a reasonable degree prior to planting.

In addition to poplar and willow cuttings, cuttings of currant, grape, tamarisk and other plants that can normally be increased by hardwood cuttings should be treated in the same way.

Pays to be a swimmer

Any non-swimmer who has ever found himself beyond his depth in water knows the feeling of panic that can ensue. Many people have drowned and dragged others under with them, because of panic.

A knowledge of how to swim and float is a lifesaver: even an indifferent swimmer can take care of himself in deep water if he knows how to keep afloat. There is still time to learn to swim before vacation days come around and most towns and cities have some facilities for swimming lessons.

It pays to be a swimmer, not only for safety's sake, but also for the benefits of this healthy exercise.

Timber wolf setting at new museum depicts marauders on trail of moose

REGINA.—The timber wolf, common in forested parts of Saskatchewan, will be the subject of an interesting display at the new provincial museum of natural history in Regina, which is scheduled to open officially later this spring.

This display case depicts a crisp moonlit winter night in typical wolf range country of Saskatchewan. In the foreground, standing like among spruce trees and willows are two adult timber wolves. A little further back toward the forested hills and snow-covered ravine which makes up the horizon, two more wolves are approaching.

The setting for the scene is taken from east-central Saskatchewan, not far from the Manitoba border and looking north from the portage between Hell Diver lake and Shallow lake in the Pasquia provincial forest. Seven miles to the north of the area which has been reproduced is the Carrot River flowing eastward toward The Pas in Manitoba. To the west, or left side of the case rises the escarpment of the Pasquia Hills.

The portage trail can be seen clearly marked by a tall spruce tree which has had the limbs partly cut away near the top. This serves as a marker plainly visible from the far side of the lake and helps guide the canoe traveller in summer or the dog team musher in winter.

A moose, as can be seen by the tracks, has followed the trail and fed briefly on the willows at the right of the case.

Meanwhile a pack of wolves, consisting usually of a pair and their young from the previous spring, have left their resting place among the gullies near the timbered hills for their hunting grounds. They have struck the trail of the moose and are evidently intent upon making an attempt on its life.

Anyone viewing the display might readily imagine hearing the hunting cry of the pack starting on a medium note, rising momentarily to a high note and then gradually descending in a blood-chilling quavering wail.

This cry of the wolf has terrorized many a person while out alone on the trail, but in spite of stories abroad which say the animals are dangerous to humans, about 200 years, authorities report there is not one case on record of a timber wolf attacking a person.
